TOPIC

Are our investments positioned to meet future challenges?

Money makes the world go round – an old saying, which still holds true today. But money comes with responsibility: where and how we invest directly impacts the planet. Not only is the conscious use of resources vital but also the ability to adapt intelligently to future challenges.

By 2050, earth will be home to 9.3 billion people; they will need food, will want to travel, shop and engage in hobbies. This will further test our planet's limits. Resilience will be key and markets already confirm what we witness during Covid-19:

the more companies are sustainable, the more "future-proof" they will be and therefore better positioned to meet the challenges ahead.

SPEAKER

Béatrice Hirzel Corte, Globalance Bank AG

Béatrice leads the client segment of Foundations. Prior to joining Globalance Bank, Béatrice worked for 17 years at Schroders. As a Member of the Extended Management Board in Switzerland, she looked after institutional clients and was responsible for the client servicing, marketing and for communication departments in Switzerland.

After her studies, Béatrice launched her career at Swiss Bank Cooperation in portfolio management for Swiss institutional clients before she moved to the business development side after the merger with UBS.

Béatrice Hirzel holds a degree in economics (lic. oec. publ.) from the University of Zurich and is a Chartered European Financial Analyst (CEFA/AZEK). She is a Member of the Board at VPS AG and moreover a member of the Board of Trustees of the Zoo Zurich.
